Gruesome discovery

Rural residents speak of odd occurrences
as two bodies found

By VICTORIA HANDYSIDES
Metro Edmonton

Residents in a quiet rural area north of Lamont say they're getting used to strange occurrences in their neighbourhood, but never thought they would add the discovery of two dead bodies to the list.

On Friday afternoon, a farmer seeding his field made a gruesome discovery, when he found two dead bodies in a wooded area lining his farmland, south of Highway 45.

Police have not released the identities of the deceased, nor any details, including gender, age, or cause of death, pending a medical examiner's report, to be released today.

Cpl. Wayne Oakes of RCMP 'K' Division said that though a time of death has not yet been pinpointed, it doesn't appear the bodies were recently dumped in the area, about 70 km northeast of Edmonton.

"This didn't just happen within the past couple of days. How far back in time, I don't know."

Oakes said that Project KARE has been contacted, but is not involved in the investigation. Project KARE is a task force that examines the disappearances of people with high-risk lifestyles.

Neighbours in the area said they are becoming more familiar with strange behaviour.

Nicole Hofer said that about a month ago, she and her boyfriend discovered a vehicle engulfed in flames in a field across from where the bodies were found.

"We didn't really think much about it, but then they found those two bodies, so we think it's connected," she said. "It was a random, brand-new truck on fire in the middle of a field. That doesn't happen around here."

Pilot, 77, injured in crash

Man was headed to annual fly-in breakfast

By JEFF CUMMINGS
Metro Edmonton

An Edmonton pilot flying to an annual fly-in breakfast at Lacombe airport was airlifted to an Edmonton hospital with serious head injuries yesterday after his homemade aircraft crashed and split in two in a nearby field.

Herman Oostlander, 77, the only occupant of the two-seat, single-wing plane, was ejected when the plane crashed shortly after 8:30 a.m. north of the airport, said Lacombe police.

Oostlander was airlifted to Royal Alexandra hospital and was listed in critical condition last night.

Bob Jablonski, a local search and rescue volunteer, was on the scene right away and said the man had severe head injuries.

"It wasn't a pretty sight," said Jablonski in a phone interview. "The plane was on the ground and the man was lying outside the aircraft."

Lacombe police and Transport Canada are investigating.

Rash of stabbings keeps police busy

Weekend assaults include 3 injured at grad party

BY JEFF CUMMINGS
Metro Edmonton

Police are investigating a rash of stabbings over the weekend, including a high school grad party that ended in bloody violence early Saturday morning.

A 17-year-old suffered from non-life-threatening stab wounds after a fight broke out at the party at the Delta Centre Suite Hotel, shortly before 3:45 a.m., police said.

A male high school student and another person who has yet to be identified by police got into a fight.

Two other 17-year-old students also suffered slash wounds in a melee at the posh downtown hotel, description

» Police only have a vague description of the suspect in the stabbing at a downtown high school grad party, where one student was stabbed and two others received slash wounds. The suspect is described as a dark-skinned male who could be about 20 years old.

police said.

In another incident, a 20-year-old man was sent to hospital in serious condition a few hours after he was stabbed near 69 Avenue and 172 Street, police said.

Police said the man was stabbed once in the neck by a suspect in what appeared to be an attack that wasn't random.

And while downtown police were responding to the violent high school party, north division officers were also dealing with a stabbing near 164 Avenue and 115 Street where a 24-year-old man was treated for serious, non-life-threatening injuries.

The man was stabbed during a dispute over DVDs at a home where he was found wounded, lying on his back on the patio, police said.

Police are looking for two suspects that are described as native males between the ages of 17 and 18 years old.

A limo driver also had his arm slashed and a female passenger suffered serious stab wounds Saturday morning while the driver tried to break up a fight between two sisters in his car, police said.

Police charged 20-year-old Samantha Noman with two counts of aggravated assault, two counts of assault with a weapon, and four breaches in relation to the limo attack.

Teen dies from injuries in ATV crash

Girl was not wearing helmet

By VICTORIA HANDYSIDES
Metro Edmonton

A 14-year-old Fort McMurray girl is dead of injuries sustained in an ATV accident over the May long weekend.

The girl and a 17-year-old companion were rushed to hospital in Edmonton via air ambulance, suffering from massive head trauma, after a 4 a.m. joyride sent the two flying from an off-road vehicle.

Fort McMurray RCMP believe alcohol was a factor in the accident, and say neither the 17-year-old nor 14-year-old girl wore a helmet.

Constable Ali Fayed said it's believed the girls were travelling within Fort McMurray city limits at the time of the crash.

The 14-year-old girl died in hospital Saturday. The 17-year-old remains in hospital. Though her condition has improved slightly, she remains in serious condition.

ATV safety has been a critical issue with health professionals and law enforcement officers in recent weeks, as the number of accidents involving dead or injured children rises.

Two weeks ago near Taber, a two-year-old boy died after being thrown from an out-of-control quad jam-packed with five people.

A week ago, a 17-year-old boy died from injuries sustained in an ATV accident near Stony Plain.

Over the long weekend, the Stollery Children's Hospital saw 12 patients with injuries caused by ATV accidents. More than half were listed as major or serious traumas.

New test controversial

Passing a language test will soon be a requirement of immigrating to Canada, and the rigorous language test will either be fair and efficient with the influx of newcomers, or vastly discriminatory and fatally flawed, depending on whom you talk to.

The International English Language Testing System exam, says the Canadian Bar Association, is too diffi-

But Burke Thornton, immigration program officer at the visa office in Buffalo, said earlier this month the universal test will improve the efficiency of the immigration system and will help move people "through the queue."

eBay Sellers are Making $10,000+ a Month

By
Frances M. Kelsey

Why settle for mediocre pay and long hours when it is possible to make over $100,000 a year from the comfort of your home?

Over 170 million people are registered eBay users and 1.3 million are making a full-time living through online auctioning, leaving their everyday jobs.

Duane Barney, online auction expert, is one of many people who have left the mundane aspect of a 9-to-5 desk job and begun to make his own income at home with the help of his children. Now Barney is making around $10,000 a month by selling a variety of items that can be found in his home.

"People shouldn't wait until they find themselves out of a job before they find out they are not financially secure," Barney said. "They should start ensuring their own and their family's financial future immediately."

Not only does eBay allow people to make money and get rid of some things that may no longer be of use, there are more benefits than cash. If a seller can make $1,000 a month or more, they can qualify for most of the same benefits that are available in a regular 9-to-5 job, such as health, vision and dental. Over 200,000 members of eBay qualify for these benefits and more.

Not only does using eBay at home cut back on paying for gas and having to deal with the hassle of rush hour traffic, but also consumer demands through the Internet are continually growing, allowing for a higher income rate per seller.

According to a speech given by former Senior Vice President of Products Development, Lynn Reddy, on average one car is sold every two minutes, a car part or accessory sold every three seconds, diamond jewelry every eighty-three seconds, and a pair of Timberland shoes every ten minutes. These items and more, from concert tickets to stamps and coins, are sold daily by average people looking to gain an income or better their current cash flow.

"Anybody can do it if they know the right technique," Barney said. "With the right techniques it's easy to make extra income."

Barney said he does not recommend attempting to become a full-time online auctioneer with eBay without learning the basics first.

"It's like driving a car," Barney said. "It's easy to do but if no one shows you how to drive, you could end up in an accident that costs you time and money to fix."

This should not be taken as discouragement to start working with online auctions.

It is rather easy to get started in the process and become acquainted with the techniques.

With a little homework, access to an Internet-ready computer, and some basic computer knowledge, anyone can be on their way to becoming a member of the fastest growing community in the Canada and the U.S.

"Why wait to win the lottery," Barney said, "when selling on eBay is like winning the lotto every day."

By late afternoon he said the backlot fire was contained to a single structure — the King Kong exhibit — as firefighters used bulldozers

The blaze destroyed about five structures within a faux New York set used in various movies and television shows, including one sound stage. Also damaged was the King Kong attraction, an alley from The Sting and a set from Back to the Future.

The fire caused traffic jams for miles in all directions to the studio, where a building housing a video vault had been badly damaged and the vault itself was "compromised."

A Universal spokeswoman said about 40,000 to 50,000 videos had been damaged but the studios either had copies of those films or could easily copy them.

Climate fight blamed for price hikes

UN-led climate talks kick off today in Germany with experts trying to forge a global warming pact facing a new challenge from critics who say climate change measures are partly to blame for higher food and energy prices.

The meeting is the second of eight which aim to secure a global climate deal by the end of next year, to come into force after the first round of the Kyoto Protocol expires in 2012.

The Bonn talks focus on the "toolkit" of steps which can curb rising emissions of greenhouse gas such as carbon dioxide, which scientists say risk catastrophic climate change.

Senior officials from more than 160 countries face the difficulty, however, that many such measures — including carbon taxes and emissions trading — deliberately raise energy costs by penalizing carbon emissions from burning fossil fuels.

Shuttle nearing Space Station

Space shuttle Discovery closed in on the International Space Station yesterday to deliver a Japanese research laboratory, a new crew member and a repair kit for the outpost's faulty toilet.

The spaceship was scheduled to arrive at the station shortly before 2 p.m. EDT today. The shuttle and seven astronauts blasted off from the Kennedy Space Center in Florida Saturday for a two-week mission.

Because the Japanese laboratory in Discovery's cargo bay is so large, it is flying without an inspection boom routinely used since the 2003 shuttle Columbia catastrophe to scour the ships for damage. The last shuttle to visit the space station left its boom behind for the Discovery crew to use and return to Earth.

The astronauts yesterday performed a limited inspection of the ship's wings using a camera on the end of the shuttle's 50-foot robot arm. The arm is only long enough for the crew to take images of the upper surfaces of the wings' leading edges. A more thorough inspection is planned for later in the mission.

The researchers tracked a group of very low birth weight, pre-term infants in Buenos Aires to gauge the protective effect of breastfeeding against respiratory infections in babies.

They found that infant girls who were breastfed were far less likely than baby boys who were breastfed to develop serious respiratory infections requiring hospitalization.

A lot of research has shown that breastfed babies enjoy a range of health benefits compared to those given baby formula beyond combating respiratory infections.

These include fewer ear, stomach or intestinal infections, digestive problems, skin diseases and allergies, and less risk of developing high blood pressure, diabetes and obesity.

And some research has shown breast-fed babies are smarter, too.

Harder to forecast inflation: Carney

Fuel prices making predictions difficult

Rising gas prices are making it increasingly hard for the Bank of Canada to forecast inflation, central bank Governor Mark Carney said in an interview published Saturday in the French-language newspaper La Presse.

High gasoline prices contributed to push Canada's year-on-year inflation rate up to 1.7 per cent in April, from 1.4 per cent in March.

Carney said it was too soon to assess the trend for the bank's core inflation rate, which strips out energy prices. The core rate was 1.5 per cent in April, up from 1.3 per cent in March.

The interview was conducted on Tuesday, before the government on Friday released figures that showed the economy unexpectedly shrank by an annualized 0.3 per cent in the first quarter.

Eskis aim to get aggressive

Wolmer wants an explosive offence this season

By ROBIN BROWNLEE
for Metro Edmonton

The vertically challenged Edmonton Eskimos will be thinking big in terms of offence this season.

After a couple years of coming up short, the Eskimos promise to strike fear — or at least make an attempt — into defences under offensive co-ordinator Rick Worman, rather than repeat a stultifying approach woefully short on pizzazz and results.

Bigger has to be better, no? "We're going to be the initiators," Worman said after the Eskimos opened training camp at Clarke Field yesterday. "We're going to have routes in to throw the ball down the field."

"I'm not going to say we're going to take what the defence gives us. We're going to push the ball and be focused on explosive execution. That's our philosophy — EE is explosive execution."

At 5-12-1 and out of the playoffs for the second straight campaign, there's lots of room for improvement.

Much of that improvement will have to come from an offence that was too predictable under Jacques Chapdelaine a year ago.

The Eskimos were second-last in the CFL with 34 touchdowns and third-worst with 371 points as they opted to dither about rather than stretch defences with anything resembling vertical fireworks. Not enough game-breakers and difference-makers.

"We're going to read the defence and throw the ball to the appropriate guys based on coverages," Worman said.

"We're going to challenge people in man coverage. We're going to look at what's going on in zone coverage and be able to find a way to move the ball down the field."

After missing the end of last season with a shoulder injury, quarterback Ricky Ray didn't look like he'd missed a beat as he peppered the secondary with pigskin yesterday. He welcomes the change.

"The last couple of years it's been a lot of underneath stuff, trying to take what the defence gives us," Ray said. "I think we were worried about just moving the chains too much."

"We got away from trying to hit some big plays. I think that's what's been lacking from the offence the past few years. You've got to put some pressure on those defensive backs and let them know we're going to take some shots."

You can't swing for the fences every play, but the Eskimos will be far more aggressive. With Ray back in the fold, the Eskimos look like they could have the personnel to pull it off.

Ron McClendon holds the ball firmly during a drill on the first day of the 2008 Edmonton Eskimos Training Camp at Clarke Field yesterday.

Award winner Barlow talks to Metro about the global water crisis

By BRIAN TOWIE
for Metro Edmonton

Leave it to the unsinkable Maude Barlow to protest an award she's about to receive.

The national chairperson for one of the nation's biggest citizen activist groups, The Council of Canadians, is indeed grateful for the Citation of Lifetime Achievement that she'll accept at the Canadian Environment Awards in Toronto tonight for her work in raising awareness about the growing global water crisis. However, she says that should there be demonstrators outside the gala protesting Shell — activists who argue the presence of the oil company and award sponsor is a travesty against the global climate change fight — she will show what are the Canadian Environment Awards?

The Canadian Environment Awards celebrate the people behind grassroots hands-on environmental initiatives happening across Canada, and their efforts to reduce waste and educate their communities.

The accolades are well-deserved, says award-winning writer Rick Boychuk, panelist for the gala and editor-in-chief of Canadian Geographic Magazine, which founded the awards gala in 2002. He says activists, especially those working to fight climate change, constantly face uphill battles.

"Funding for what they do is always a challenge," says Boychuk. "Research is as well: Getting your hands on reliable scientific information. And keep in mind these people are volunteers; they take time out of their 9-to-5 lives to do this."

» For more on the gala, visit www.canadiangeographic.ca/cea2008/home.asp.

Activist Maude Barlow will receive the Citation of Lifetime Achievement at the Canadian Environment Awards gala in Toronto tonight.

her solidarity by joining them arm-in-arm.

As one of the few energy companies in support of the Kyoto Accord, Barlow notes Shell has made some progressive strides, but she still has some major concerns, among them being its coal-bed methane operations in Northern B.C. and its history in Nigeria.

"I will support the demonstrators outside if they are there. I don't see it as a choice: You can go inside and accept the award but at the same time make a statement, which is what I'll do," says the author of Blue Covenant: The Global Water Crisis And The Coming Battle For The Right To Water. "You can be critical of these corporations and advance the work together. I think I'll be doing inside-outside support."

Barlow plans to address several hackle-raising subjects during her acceptance speech. The main ones include the danger of the corporate takeover of water systems and the government's enthusiastic plans to sell off Canadian water resources to an already thirsty U.S. — adding the Bush administration and the Pentagon have been getting advice from Lockheed Martin, the world's largest weapons manufacturer, on how to appropriate water from sources outside of its borders.

Barlow also wants Canada to recognize water as a fundamental human right at the United Nations, and she doesn't buy Ottawa's argument to the contrary, saying she can't imagine a more willing vendor than the Harper government.

"Our government says if water is a human right, we'll be forced to sell it to Americans, which is crazy," Barlow said.

"A human right is for people who are dying, it's not to provide golf courses or swimming pools to wealthy people. It's just an excuse: The real reason Canada is opposing the right to water at the UN is because in NAFTA, we have supported water as a tradeable good. And it would be a true contradiction — which I think would be great, but they don't think would be great — if we were to say it was a right."

The lack of potable water is an emergency for many parts of the globe, says Barlow, and an award ceremony such as this is an opportunity for her to get the word out that this predicament could reach Canadians sooner than they might think.

"The Earth is kind of like an apple that's green in some parts, but it has brown spots where it's drying up. We have to have this image in our minds," she said. "We have to live differently. We have to grow our food differently. We have to stop assuming technology is going to solve everything, because it isn't. We have to protect our public water systems. This, to me, is an emergency that equals climate change any day. I do what I can to sound the alarm and get this information out to the world."

going against the flow

Below are Maude Barlow's tips on what you can do to save water:

» Don't buy bottled water, says Barlow. "It's a scam. It's sitting in plastic, which is made up of fossil fuels and chemicals. Go back to regulated and tested tap water. Last year, we put something like 200 billion litres of water in plastic bottles around the world. Ninety-five per cent of those did not get recycled. This is insane."

It's not acceptable."

» Notify your provincial and federal politicians that you support the campaign for a National Water Act — which would set national water standards, map out ground water supplies and ban the commercial export of water (www.RightToWater.ca).

» Use low-flow showerheads, washing machines and dishwashers.

Camp unites eco-activists

By ERIC BOWLING
for Metro Edmonton

Eco-activists from various walks of life are converging in Montana this week for a climate action camp.

Denise Ogonoski, who will teach a climbing and rappelling workshop at the training intensive, explained the camp would also offer seminars on non-violent resistance, organizing campaigns and speaking to media.

The camp is located near Missoula, Mont.

"It's a bit of a convergence for a whole bunch of activists across North America," said Ogonoski, "It's a really good meeting to skill-share and to teach a lot of the skills that you really can't learn anywhere else from some of the best trainers."

The camp is part of a larger effort to network the plethora of activists groups throughout North America.

"It's truly important to network between groups. As localized as our struggles are, they are all very interconnected. When you look at the tar sands in Alberta and how they're connected to energy projects in the U.S and B.C ... all of the issues are connected ultimately."

While the camp is already underway, Ogonoski plans to take the skills she learns and run her own activist workshops in the Edmonton area later in the year.

"It's important to build movements around critical environmental issues."

Taking action on emissions

In the fight against climate change, a Toronto company is proving actions speak louder than words.

Nominated for a Canadian Environment Award, Zerofootprint helps businesses manage their carbon emissions while simultaneously giving average Canadians the tools to reduce their own carbon footprints.

Company founder Ron Dembo says Zerofootprint has always been about making change happen rather than just playing lip service.

"Social change comes by setting examples and doing things," Dembo said.

To that end, the company's website, www.zerofootprint.net, lets people create a Personal Carbon Manager account, which tracks their carbon footprints.

Commuters challenged

Canadian cities, people compete to save kilometres

By ERIC EMIN WOOD
for Metro Edmonton

If you're like most commuters, you'll spend another $183 driving your car to and from work this week. Sponsored by Telus, the National Commuter Challenge — in which cities across the country compete until June 7 to save kilometres — aims to change that.

"It's an opportunity for people to try something outside of their single-occupant vehicles," says Kathryn Winkler, chair of the National Commuter Challenge and founder and executive director of the Sustainable Alberta Association, which runs the Calgary program.

"I've been a commuter cyclist forever," says Winkler. "And in 1993, I was moving to a new job in Calgary and somebody mentioned there was this little challenge going on, so I got my workplace involved."

In 1999, those same participants thought it would be fun to challenge another city. "So we set up an organization,"

This week, commuters are being challenged to walk, bike, carpool or take public transit.

says Winkler, "and in 2000 we launched the first national challenge among cities across the country."

The challenge encourages commuters to walk, bike, take public transportation or carpool during Environment Week this week. Other participating cities include Vancouver, Edmonton, Winnipeg, London and Halifax. "Everyone across the country can participate," says Winkler, "and if they're not, they can just go to the website."

Last year, the challenge had 170 communities and 1,757 workplaces participating, representing 37,703 Canadians.

"It's a fun event, but in trying to find your way to work, taking the bus, or getting there by bike, you're actually giving yourself an option once the event is finished," says Winkler. "Quite often, the largest barrier is that people don't know where their bus routes are,

intense competition

» Winners of the award program, started 13 years ago, were chosen from a pool of 4,200 kids across Canada by a panel of judges, which included Canadian Senators, business and educational professionals and past award recipients.

Proving that giving to others makes you richer, 20 of Canada's brightest volunteers are getting a free university education as reward for their efforts in helping to make their own communities better.

The 20 high school students from across Canada were each chosen to receive a TD Canada Trust Scholarship for Community Leadership, valued at up to $60,000 and covering four years of tuition, spending money and offers of summer employment with TD Canada Trust.

Wu

Each student demonstrated initiative, ingenuity and perseverance in doing something that benefited his or her own community, qualities the program's executive director, Jane Thompson, says cut across all of Canada's cultural, economic and political barriers.

Fong

"Our winners are from the full range of Canadian society, coast to coast, all different income levels and all sorts of issues in our community. It's an incredible experience just to spend time with these amazing young people," Thompson said.

Jane Wu, 17, from Calgary created and organized the "Beauty and Brains" conference to promote stronger career aspirations among young women. The conference was so successful, it now has the funding to continue for the next three-to-five years and Wu plans to take it nationwide.

Fatoba

"What we really want to do is to expose women to the vast horizons they have in front of them. It's absolutely amazing to see how a small idea can snowball into something so big," Wu said.

Her advice? Try getting engaged in your own community.

"When you're being selfless you learn so much about yourself and connect so well to your community. Just do it once and I promise you'll be hooked," she said.

Cassandra Fong, 18, from Vancouver did something sure to amaze viewers of crime dramas like CSI and Law & Order — she created a lie detector test which is 100 per cent accurate, compared to about 90 per cent accuracy for a traditional Group shot of all 20 winners from across Canada who won TD scholarships of up to $60,000.

The secret is that instead of measuring shifts in perspiration and heart rate like a normal test, Fong's test measures chaotic shifts in stomach frequencies. She got the idea for the technique when learning about how the stomach works in her biology class.

Kayode Fatoba

Fong's invention has garnered interest from police services and university researchers and Fong has already started the patent process.

As for her friends, Fong jokes, "They definitely won't be lying to me now!"

Seventeen-year-old Kayode Fatoba received the award for creating a soccer program to give kids in his community, Toronto's troubled Jane and Finch neighbourhood, something constructive and empowering to do in their free time. The soccer program started two years ago with the only funding coming from a local hot dog vendor who paid for uniforms and gave the kids free hot dogs after games. Today the program boasts three teams with roughly 15 players each and is growing. Without the scholarship award, Fatoba would never have gotten a chance to go to university — now he plans to attend Simon Fraser University to study Health Sciences in September.

"The most rewarding part of the program is that a lot of people look up to me, and that's something you can't buy. When a kid looks up to you, that's priceless," Fatoba said.

Generations not chatting

Age gap lowers communication, poll suggests

Workers aren't bridging the generation gap because 20-something employees rarely chat to those in their 50s and 60s, according to a new survey.

The poll of 3,494 adults by employment services group Randstad USA showed that 51 per cent of baby boomers and 66 per cent of older workers report little to no interaction with their younger colleagues.

Employment experts fear the lack of communication could create a shortage of skilled labour because retiring baby boomers aren't passing on their knowledge and experience.

"Older workers stereotypically view younger workers as not as competent and not having such a work ethic," said Eric Buntin, managing director of marketing and operations for Randstad USA. "Younger workers view the older as not thinking outside the box."

A new study indicates that younger people don't talk enough with their elders on the job, and this could pose a problem as the more experienced workers are not passing along their knowledge to the younger crop.

He said the different generations of employees do not have the same expectations

« Older workers stereotypically view younger workers as not as competent and not having such a work ethic. Younger workers view the older as not thinking outside the box. The key is that organizations find a way structurally for generations to interact. »

Eric Buntin
of Randstad USA

"It has to be bringing them together in meaningful ways so they're engaged in projects together and that has to be managed in the course of time."

The survey examined four generations, Generation Y, born between 1980 to 1988; Generation X, born 1965 to 1979; baby boomers born in 1946 to 1964 and matures born before 1945.

The survey also showed that three of the four generations said they have little to no interaction with the most experienced workers — matures.

That's despite Generation Y people having a relatively poor view of their age group, with only 29 per cent of Generation Y workers rating their generation as competent, the survey said.

Idol touts talent gains

Producer, judge say pool one of the best in years

By SANDY CAETANO
for Metro Edmonton

Another season of Canadian Idol starts tomorrow and the talk among insiders is that this will be the most talented group yet.

Canadian Idol executive producer John Brunton says this year's group is the strongest the singing competition has ever seen.

Sure, we've heard this before, but Brunton says he can't stress how true this fact really is this year.

"It will sound like it's a cliché, that this is the best season of talent we've ever had ... and everybody will say 'Well, you say that every year don't you?' Brunton tells Metro. "I haven't said that every year, and I think one of our strongest overall years of talent was season two with Kalan (Porter) and Jacob (Hoggard) and Theresa (Sokyrka)."

This year's auditions drew musicians from places such as Los Angeles and London, England. These are people who have been gaining enough success to get them gigs and allow them to get their names known out in the music industry.

"These were not the types of people who would normally turn out for our show in the early years, but (it's) the credibility and also the fact that it's so difficult to get a record deal these days," says Brunton. "We've cut a good 50 people that in previous seasons may have made the Top 22 ... we really have an interesting group and for a whole bunch of different reasons."

Canadian Idol judge Jake Gold echoes Brunton's opinions regarding this year's competitors.

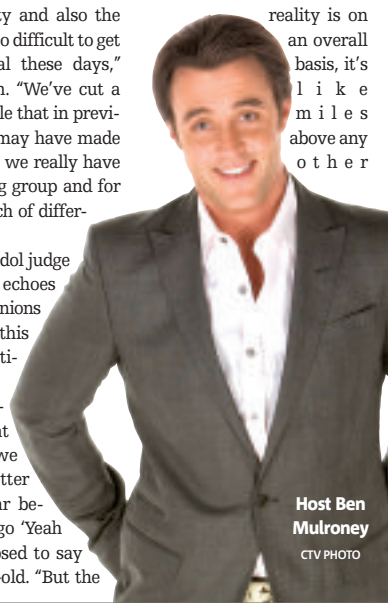

"The problem is that every time we say it's better than the year before, people go 'Yeah you're supposed to say that,'" says Gold. "But the reality is on an overall basis, it's like miles above any other year. It's not just 'Oh it's better,' it's like a whole other level of better."

The challenge though came down to the final day where Gold and fellow judges Farley Flex, Sass Jordan and Zack Werner chose the Top 22 this year.

"We actually sat down and said, 'How can we actually, in good conscience send this person home?' and it was that difficult," he says. "There's an overall confidence among them that we've never seen before. This level of knowing who they are and the fact that they're very sure of themselves."

Canadian actress wins for role in movie Juno

By SANDY CAETANO
for Metro Edmonton

It was a night for Canadian actors to shine as Ellen Page captured an early win for Juno and Mike Myers took the reins as host of last night's 2007 MTV Movie Awards.

Myers, best known for his portrayal of Austin Powers, kicked off the gala event with a dance-off between himself and singer Chris Brown at the Gibson Amphitheatre in California.

Myers also managed to shamelessly promote his upcoming film The Love Guru and brought back Dana Carvey for a Wayne's World reunion skit.

Hancock's Charlize Theron, Will Smith and Jason Bateman presented Page with the golden popcorn for best female performance for her role in Juno.

Host Mike Myers

"It's not every day that you get a golden popcorn from Charlize Theron, Will Smith and Jason Bateman," said Page. "This was just a little movie we made and it was because of everyone that went to see it that made it what it was."

The biggest award of the night was best movie, which was awarded to the 2007 blockbuster Transformers.

"Thank you so much. This is the coolest award ... I wish I could strap this to my producer's chair," said executive producer Michael Bay, also known for movies Armageddon and Pearl Harbor.

Best comedic performance was awarded to Johnny Depp for Walt Disney Pictures' Pirates Of The Caribbean: At World's End. Depp also took hardware in the category of best villain for Sweeney Todd: The Demon Barber of Fleet Street.

Other wins included Iron Man for best summer movie you have seen, and I Am Legend starring Will Smith for best male performance.

Minimalist style

OK, OK... so it's hard to keep up with what's in and what's out, but one style that remains perennially popular — no matter what the decorating climate — is "minimalism." Our take, however, is rather different from other designers who create this style. And of course we know best.

What frustrates us most about "ADAM" (Another Designer Attempting Minimalism) is the fact that results can be so hard on the eye. Sure that concrete floor is gorgeous, that Minotti sofa looks wonderfully hip and those pure white walls promote a crisp clean art gallery aesthetic, but try living in a space that's more sterile than a vet's surgery and you'll soon feel decoratively neutered.

Take our advice: warm things up. This week's Home Show demonstrates how homes are for living in. Yup, finding that elusive balance between paring back and adding more is our raison d'être. If you crave a slick tailored feel, simply remove unnecessary elements and ensure every item serves a useful purpose. Sure, that Minotti sofa is gorgeous, but wouldn't it be better to have something custom made to suit your scheme? Try Silva Upholstery (www.silvaupholstery.com) and be amazed at how affordable "bespoke" furniture actually is.

Next, break minimalist "rules" and dress with a selection of throws and cushions. Controversial! Sure, that concrete floor is super sexy but for God's sake warm things up a little with a sexy rug by Millenia (www.milleniaincarpet.com), Canada's best custom flooring manufacturer. Don't go overboard but at least allow yourself some comfort. This, to us, is the essence of "soft" minimalism; don't be too strict, select things that are personal to your space and invest in good quality kit from the start.

C and J's top six minimalist style tips:

1 Ditch that bulky TV — opt for a wall hung flat screen that makes a serious statement without cluttering floor space.

2 Unify flooring choices as you move from room to room — an easy way to make space feel bigger.

3 Low slung sofas, clean-lined cabinetry and unfussy "pot lights" will help keep mood "low key."

4 White walls are achingly cool but don't be too austere — opt instead for softer "off white" tones such as "Pale Shadow" by Dulux.

5 Store CDs and DVDs in inexpensive boxes from Ikea — you don't need to break the bank to look organized.

6 Be selective — one good statement sculpture or art work is WAY better than an assembly of ill conceived clutter.

HGTV hosts Colin and Justin continue their mission of beautification with their Canadian design series The Home Show, airing Tuesdays at 11 p.m. and Saturdays at 4 p.m. ET on HGTV. www.hgtv.ca

Canada's Worst Handyman

It's not clear how knowing how to sew makes someone a handyman or woman, but in this new episode, the contestants are challenged to make curtains. Logically, most fail miserably. Heck, most contractors, plumbers and electricians probably don't know how to sew fancy curtains or pillows. Also tackled are building a closet and installing wall sconces. 8 PM on DISC

Cruise's custom shoes

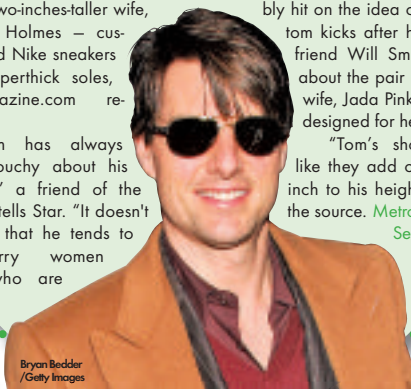

Tom Cruise may have found a way to get closer to his two-inches-taller wife, Katie Holmes — customized Nike sneakers with superthick soles, starmagazine.com reports.

"Tom has always been touchy about his height," a friend of the actor tells Star. "It doesn't help that he tends to marry women who are taller than he is."

The 5'7" megastar probably hit on the idea of custom kicks after hearing friend Will Smith rave about the pair his 5'-tall wife, Jada Pinkett Smith, designed for herself.

"Tom's shoes look like they add one extra inch to his height," says the source. Metro News Services

Depressed or chemically dependent?

An insider has revealed that Cirque Lodge doesn't treat patients suffering from depression alone, casting doubts on actress Kirsten Dunst having claimed she went there to seek treatment for the condition, starmagazine.com reports.

"I went there for depression ... I was struggling, and I had the opportunity to go somewhere and take care of myself," Dunst said.

According to the insider, however, patients at the Sundance, Utah, facility, must have some kind of chemical dependency. "They would refer you somewhere else if it's just depression," the insider explained.

Amy makes dubious return

Singer Amy Winehouse was an hour late to her first post-rehab concert Friday night, El News Online reports.

The Grammy-winning soul chanteuse performed at the sold-out Rock in Rio music festival in Lisbon, Portugal.

Winehouse's voice cracked throughout her performance. She had visible cuts on her left arm and a bandage on her right hand. The trouble-prone diva is famous for her tardiness, show cancellations, offstage antics and rehab stints.

Just last week, her father accepted a prestigious British award on her behalf because she was late to the ceremony.

Third time lucky?

Charlie Sheen wed Brooke Mueller in small ceremony in Beverly Hills Friday night, the couple's rep confirmed to usmagazine.com.

Guests included father Martin Sheen and brother Emilio Estevez as well as Eric Dane and his wife, Rebecca Gayheart.

Sheen's daughters Sam, 4, and Lola, 3, with ex-wife Denise Richards were flower girls. Richards did not attend.

This is the third marriage for the Two and a Half Men star, 42, and the first for Mueller, 30, a real estate agent. Contrary to online reports, Mueller "is not pregnant," a rep for the couple told Us-magazine.com.

"I honestly think they're a match made in heaven," Richards told Us Weekly recently. Metro News Services

Smith dishes on lasting love

The D-word is often slung around the Hollywood Hills and now even Will Smith has been uttering the syllables.

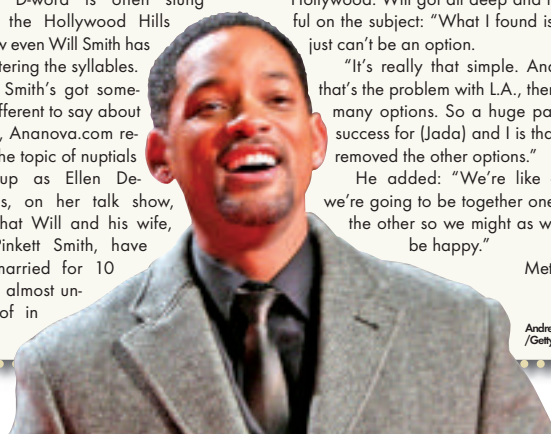

But Smith's got something different to say about divorce, Ananova.com reports. The topic of nuptials came up as Ellen DeGeneres, on her talk show, noted that Will and his wife, Jada Pinkett Smith, have been married for 10 years — almost unheard of in Hollywood. Will got all deep and meaningful on the subject: "What I found is divorce just can't be an option."

"It's really that simple. And I think that's the problem with L.A., there are so many options. So a huge part of the success for (Jada) and I is that we just removed the other options."

He added: "We're like — listen, we're going to be together one way or the other so we might as well try to be happy."
